Chris Poeschel	We use RDG.myrealddata.net as our Remote Desktop Gateway, which is currently resolving fine and responding. However, the internal server we connect to — jbcsellc.myrealddata.net — no longer resolves via DNS. This is causing our RDP sessions to hang at “Initiating remote connection.” Can you please confirm: Whether jbcsellc.myrealddata.net is still the correct internal computer name? If not, what is the new name or IP address we should be connecting to behind the gateway? Some machines may still connect briefly due to cached DNS, but new connections fail consistently.	8:04:03 PM

Manish Singh	Yes, jbcsellc.myrealddata.net is still the correct internal computer name.	8:06:44 PM
Chris Poeschel	why can we not consistently connect? It is very hit and miss.	8:09:16 PM
